* The best service and the best kitchen I found the last three months here in london.

*Prix Fixe Brasserie is everything you'd want from a French restaurant - great wholesome food, very 'French' decor and an old man on the piano

*Me and my partner dined at Prix Fixe Brasserie last night after the theatre, Service was very prompt and the food was delicious, Very good value for money Would highly recommend this and would definetly go back.

*Gorgeous food, great atmosphere. Nice old man in a woolly jumper playing the piano in the corner. Only criticism would be how long we had to wait for our food, although it was worth the wait when it arrived. Would definitely recommend.

*Prix Fixe Brasserie was an impulse chioce which paid off. Beautiful food, great service, nice atmosphere. Would recommend.

*A great addition to casual dining in Soho. I have eaten here on a number of occassions since it opened and have never been disappointed. The service is efficient, food is consistently good and all great value for money. Nice decor and atmosphere . Would definately recommend this venue.

*I went there for late dinner sometime back in august. very good quality for the price. food was actually made in house, which is rare compared to all the chain restaurants youll find in london. great food and atmosphere

*So charming - great food, great staff, super location - and very reasonable. Although not a cheap value, it beats all comers in these price ranges.

*I could gush about the duck, the salmon, the steak, but I won't - the best recommendation is that anyone you take will be asking to go back again and again!

*Before 7, and all night on Mondays (and possibly Tuesdays), they have a (pre-show) two course £10.90 menu, but the a la carte menu is also really lovely french brasserie/bistro food. Have taken several London friends, all of them charmed. The staff are friendly and helpful, but not over-attentive. A good wine list, reasonable vegetarian options for a French restaurant.
